SECOND CORINTHIANS FIVE SEVENTEEN

The Rantings of a Mac Man

The other day I was watching an old rerun of "The Andy Griffith Show". In the episode a character named Ernest T. Bass was trying to stop Charlene from having a preacher wedding even though Andy as Justice of the Peace had already performed the wedding. Wise old Andy sets a trap for Ernest so the wedding could take place. I noticed that during this wedding that they sang the old hymn "Leaning on the Everlasting Arms". I looked over at Viv and said sarcastically "This is my favorite wedding song". I then sent a text to my son and his fiancé explaining what I was watching and I hoped they had planned to use that song in their wedding. He texted me back that they were and that his best man was going to wear a wedding dress just in case his fiancé's old, hillbilly boyfriends showed up. That makes sense to you if you recall this episode.

Songs truly have power and I understand why God has wanted singing in his worship. We do a great job of praising during our services and I appreciate the job the brother Jeff does leading us. But I hope singing, praising, and spiritual songs are not limited to 9am to 10am Sunday morning. Viv and I have been blessed so much by the music that we have heard and sing along with. Our car radios are always tuned to praise stations like KLove so we can be blessed. Even if you do not care for contemporary Christian music, find some CDs with praise music you enjoy. I love it when I am in Jennifer's van and she puts in an Acapella CD and those young voices in the van sing along with it. Even right now Vivian is sitting with Rhett using her phone to play some "Hide 'em in your Heart" children's praise songs which she sings along with to entertain, but also teach his young mind. Let us fill our lives with praise for the Almighty. Jerry McCorkle

May 1st - July 3rd we will have a series of Wednesday night studies answering the question, "Why Church?". Each week a different speaker from the area will share an answer to this question. If you are not currently attending on Wednesday evenings, please make a special effort to be there each week. We believe these studies will help to renew our passion for Christ and his church. See you there! George, George, Jeff & Mark
